SYNTAXE ARCHITECTS

Description

SYNTAXE was created in 2004 from the idea of developing a complicity between architects, complicity born during the study and confirmed by many years of working in several Belgian offices and abroad. The structure put in place was named so, as to reflect the group's desire to explore architecture as a language, at the intersection of several disciplines. This attitude, now become our methodology, allows us to explore new territories, searching for a vision which involves both social, urban, functional and formal questions. Our projects reflect this universe using a contemporary design. Our desire is to contribute with our experience and expertise in human and economic development, designing challenging spaces while providing more cultural value. With the aim to deliver always "the good architecture", we have in the recent years developped experiences in Belgium and France. Aware of the rapid evolution of our society, we spend time to the continue our employee's education in the theoretical analysis of exemplary achievements at home and abroad. Our ambition is to reach large scale international projects, with a willingness to collaborate with European offices, including some located in London.
